

A VISIT TO A DENTIST

Last Monday, Kelly had a toothache. She cried a lot. Luckily her father came back from his work. He asked her what happened. She told him that she had a toothache. After he had a bath, he took her to the dentist.

Kelly told her father that she was afraid that the doctor might give her an injection. Her father told her not to worry. He told her that an injection was not painful.

When they reached the dental clinic, Kelly's father registered her name. They waited for nearly half an hour. When it Kelly's turn, she was very nervous. Fortunately her father accompanied her. He told the dentist about the detail. After that, her father sat aside and waited for her.

The dentist said "Don't worry little girl. Next time don't eat too much sweets." He applied some medicine onto Kelly's gum. After a while, he pulled out her bad tooth and put a piece of cotton wool in her mouth. He showed Kelly her bad tooth. She felt very surprised that she did not feel any pain. At the main door, her father paid the fees. After that they went home happily.

From that day on onwards, she dared not eat any more sweets because she knows it is bad for my teeth.
